We stand here before this great hall having achieved what many people felt was an impossible goal: The restoration of Bowles Hall is underway and the reconstitution of the Bowles Hall Residential College has become a reality.

Such were the simple but inspirational words of Bowles Hall Foundation President Bob Sayles at the Hall’s July 10 official groundbreaking. Attended by more than 70 alumni, friends and university supporters, the ceremony marked the official beginning on the $40 million renovation process that will completely restore and modernize the Hall’s interior and address structural issues on Hall’s exterior. Foundation Vice President and head of construction John Baker ’(68) presided over festivities that featured speeches by Sayles and UC Berkeley Chancellor Nicholas Dirks.

“What this group has accomplished to get here today is indeed a testament to those who have lived in this hall,” said Chancellor Dirks, “and yet I also can’t help but feel that the best is yet to come.”

Dirks expressed that he hopes all Berkeley undergraduates will have a residential college experience in the coming years. It’s a component of his Berkeley Undergraduate Initiative that is, in part, focused on helping undergraduates feel more connected to their studies, their professors and each other.

“Providing the best possible support for the whole life of the student predicates academic success, and this (residential college) model seems critical,” Chancellor Dirks said. “Alumni, students, staff and faculty are joining hands for a common purpose, and that’s making undergraduates the centerpiece of this great university.”

Mike Schutz ’(66) presented the Foundation with a check for $5,000 on a pledge of $20,000 earmarked for naming rights on Room 701, his place of residence his senior year. “This Hall is filled with so many great memories for me and not a day goes by when I don’t think about it in some fashion,” said Schutz. “So it is my privilege to help support the residential college programming that will change student lives just as it changed mine.”

Walt Davie ’(54) and his wife Edie flew up from Los Angeles on a plane piloted by none other than Davie himself. “We have been part

A Message to the Bowles Hall Foundation
From UC Berkeley Chancellor Nicholas Dirks

Since my very first day at Berkeley, I have been talking about my conviction that there is no reason the world’s greatest public research university cannot provide the same sort of high-touch, high-quality collegiate experience offered by many of our smaller, private peers. When Bowles Hall re-opens in the fall of 2016 and returns to its pioneering roots as America’s first residential college, it will represent a major step towards an entirely new undergraduate experience on the Berkeley campus.

Undaunted by bureaucracy, resistance to change and the challenges inherent in any bold, innovative and untested endeavor, the Bowles Hall Foundation is turning this building, a reminder of Berkeley’s extraordinary past, into an emblem of all that we can and will accomplish in the future. At the heart of any great academic institution are a broad and diverse array of supportive communities that bring together, students, faculty, staff and alumni. These communities, in turn, foster collaboration, learning, intellectual engagement and inter-personal connection. Nothing, in my mind, is better suited to providing and sustaining those invaluable educational and communitarian experiences than a residential college. And while “only” 186 students will have the privilege of calling Bowles Hall home in the short-term, I see this as a pilot project—a vital step towards the day when we can and will offer all of our freshmen and sophomores housing in residential colleges.

My excitement arises not only from what you are doing, but also from how you are getting it done. What all of you have accomplished—the alumni, faculty, staff and students who have come together to form and support the Bowles Hall Foundation—defies all precedent and conventional wisdom about what is possible on the Berkeley campus. With little if any chance that the State of California will ever return to past levels of support for higher education, we will, more and more, need to rely on these types of public-private partnerships, as well as new models and new ways of thinking in order to sustain our excellence and our public mission. In that context the Bowles Hall Foundation—its mission, its purpose and its people—is showing all of us the enormous potential that exists when we come together and work together based on shared values, objectives and interests. This gives me great confidence for Berkeley’s future.

The Bowles Hall Foundation stands on the verge of making history for the sake of Berkeley’s future. On behalf of the entire campus, I applaud what you are accomplishing and offer my sincerest gratitude for making it possible.

of this effort from very early on,” he said, “and we wouldn’t have missed today for anything. What a great accomplishment for our alumni and the university.”

Along with Chancellor Dirks, representatives from the University included Assistant Vice Chancellor of Public Affairs Dan Mogulof, Chair of Academic Senate (and Bowles Hall Foundation board member) Panos Papagu-
Paperwork has been signed, construction bonds have been sold, and the Bowles Hall restoration process has officially begun. As we look back through the years, the reestablishment of the Bowles Hall Residential College has been a massive undertaking that’s only been possible through the dedication and financial support of people just like you – Bowles alumni, friends, UC Berkeley administration, the list goes on and on.

The project was undertaken in 2005 when Bob Sayles (’52) and a small but passionate group of Bowles Hall alumni realized the Hall had fallen into disrepair. Rather than acting as one of the nation’s premier residential halls, it had basically become a run-down freshman dormitory. In true Bowlesman fashion, they sprang into action to find a way to restore it to its previous glory. There were countless hurdles along the way, some even of herculean proportions, but the undeterred team collectively and figuratively moved mountains, turning naysayers into allies along the way. Even members of the originating Bowles family were skeptical that their dream of a restored Hall would ever be realized; at one point the family feared the Hall was destined to be bulldozed. But such adversity is nothing new for our Hall’s namesake or those who continue to honor its legacy every day.

In 1882, Philip Ernest Bowles was the very first Bowles family member to graduate from college. It was a dream made possible by his dedicated mother, an extraordinary woman who fled poverty in Ireland to provide her family with a better life in America. Along the way, she endured a series of heartbreaking tragedies but showed tremendous personal strength and integrity in her steadfast effort to send her lone surviving son Philip to college. And though she died before he earned a degree, she was alive and witnessed when Philip started college at Cal.

In 1927, Mary McNear Bowles sought to honor her husband Philip’s life by providing the funds to create Bowles Hall. At the time of her donation, she had intended to help build an endowment that would provide the financial infrastructure to support the Hall for generations to come, but the Great Depression wiped her out financially. Ever since, the Hall has been supported by its residences and alumni through a combination of residence fees and donations. And it was the latter that the Foundation called upon to fund the restoration efforts over the past 10 years.

$2.0+ Million Spent Since 2005

It takes significant and sizable donations, gifts and contributions from Bowles Hall alumni, friends, the community and even involved corporate partners to see this project to completion with sustainable operating income streams securely in place. To date, approximately 12 percent of Bowles Hall alumni have donated financial gifts and/or pledged future contributions. Collectively, more than $2 million has been donated, with many individual Bowles family members doing so along with the bulk of dollars coming from two instrumental families: a member of the Matteson family (in honor of David E. Matteson II, ’43, for which the “David E. Matteson II Lounge” will be named) and the Newman Family Foundation (in honor of Robert C. Newman, ’65, his wife Judi, and their family).

Next 12 Months: $3 Million Goal
Barring unforeseen expenses that could conceivably surface as work continues, Foundation executive leadership has determined that another $3 million will need to be raised before the doors are opened in the fall of 2016. That figure is admittedly a bit of a moving target as this project is incredibly complex, multi-faceted and fluid in nature. The focus of the capital campaign is to complete outfitting of the Hall, help fund recruitment of the initial class of 186 students who will reside at the Hall, and create an endowment so future generations do not find themselves back where this project started 10 years ago: with a zero dollar bank account. The construction bonds that were sold are earmarked for restoration of the building, and other pre-opening expenses. The actual living/learning experience will be funded through donations. Plans include support for a student-centered experience, a fully-equipped Hart Library, needed technological tools, funds to support on-site lectures and host visiting scholars, operating costs for the Foundation, and many other things.

So, the Bowles Hall Foundation is formally asking for your financial support. If you haven’t yet given, please consider doing so. Any and all amounts are needed and appreciated. If you have given, please consider sending additional dollars. There are many ways interested alumni, friends and community members can financially support Bowles Hall Residential College, a few of which include securing a naming opportunity (see sidebar), a planned gift or bequest, income from a trust or annuity, and more. Each is a gift that will keep on giving.

The Value of Giving
just ask Henry Bowles. The great grandson of Philip E. Bowles, is tremendously proud of what Sayles and his team have accomplished thus far and underscores that the entire Bowles family has rallied around it with their enthusiastic support. He is amazed to see what people can do when they put their heads together and went on to say “Fundraising will now change completely as contributors will be joining a successful venture instead of investing in a struggling project trying to achieve credibility.” Basically, due to the perseverance of the key individuals and supporters, this massive project has turned from a dream to a reality…in short, it’s actually going to happen. His brother Philip Bowles agrees, and is very grateful for the involved alumni, and quite moved that they feel so strongly about the Hall. He believes that now the project has momentum, everyone is more excited than ever and wants to be part of it and its future success. The Bowles Hall Residential College remodeling project offers a rare opportunity to be part of something bigger than ourselves.

TheMatteson family member who made a major contribution did so in honor of the late David E. Matteson II, a four-year resi dent and President of Bowles Hall who enthusiastically worked with Bob Sayles in the early stages of the project to recruit other alumni to support the cause. In addition, the donation is an expression of gratitude to the University of California for enhancing the lives of four generations of family members. Dave Matteson’s mother and mother-in-law were college chums and fellow graduates of the Class of 1909 — a huge point of pride. They both sent their children to Cal. The donor is pleased that women will now be able to enjoy the rich residential college experience offered at Bowles Hall, which will mark yet another first for the Hall.

All the pieces fell nicely into place for Robert “Bob” Newman (’65), who made a major contribution to Bowles Hall Residential College from the Newman Family Foundation. A strong supporter of the residential college concept and with fond memories of Bowles Hall – especially the social aspects and the great food – Bob really wanted to give back to Cal and was inspired by the Bowles Hall restoration effort. In fact, Bob plans to visit the campus when he celebrates his 50th college reunion this fall and will check in on the progress at the Hall. He is really looking forward to seeing the smiling faces and hearing the responses of students when Bowles Hall reopens next year.

Another generous contributor, Lawrence E. Peirano (’51 and co-founder of this project), fondly reflects on Bowles Hall as having had a lasting impact on his life in that many of his life-long and gratifying friendships began at the Hall. He and his wife still regularly host “Bowles Backyard Bash” get-togethers of Bowles Hall friends with spouses. Larry felt motivated to donate to the project in part to show his gratitude for the role Bowles Hall played in preparing him for life’s adventure. He recognizes that while Bowles Hall operated as a residential college, its residents enjoyed an exceptional rate of success in most realms of campus life, including academics, student government, social activities, and athletics.

Donor Scott Wilson (’83) is a proud contributor to the project given his own Bowles Hall experience as well as that of his father (also named Scott Wilson) who was the very first Bowles Hall Housemaster. Scott thinks it’s really important to be able to be a part of a relatively small, distinct student community within the enormous university as it helps provide a sense of “place.”

Alumnus Charlie Johnston (’88) chose to donate to the worthwhile project because it spoke to his deepest connections to Cal and has a tangible, positive goal that will have a real impact on students. Furthermore, he thinks it is critical to support a way for students to become really integrated with the university that naturally happens through the residential college concept.

Ultimately, Bowles Hall Residential College will not only nurture future generations of graduates, but it will also serve to re-acquaint and reconnect the passionate alumni with the University and Bowles Hall residents through engaging events, guest speaking or visiting alumni opportunities and more so the rich Bowles Hall tradition lives on and on and on.

Indeed, the grand re-opening of Bowles Hall Residential College will be one fine day. But with your continued support, involvement and contributions, it will just be the beginning of a new chapter for this majestic educational icon.

Donor Roll Call
Since we embarked on the Bowles Hall restoration project 10 years ago, we’ve received the enthusiastic financial support of more than 300 alumni, friends and associates who have given at least $100. We’d like to honor them here and we look forward to honoring our new donors in a similar fashion next summer.

Do you know how to get in touch with any of these folks? If so, kindly send a note to carpenter.shawna@gmail.com. Thank you!

This is a report that many of us have waited 10-plus years to write. Our project to renovate the Hall and re-establish it as a residential college is finally going to become a reality!

On June 16, we signed the Ground Lease with the University, the Development Agreement with EdR Trust, the bond Underwriting Agreement with Raymond James, and more than 50 additional agreements! By these acts, the Bowles Hall Foundation became the owner and operator of Bowles Hall for the next 45 years! This is a tribute to your support, leadership, vision, tenacity, creativity and desire to significantly improve the undergraduate residential experience at UC Berkeley—at no cost to the University or the California taxpayers. Thank you all for your support and participation! More than 600 of you have contributed generously to reaching this milestone, none more than our “heavy lifters”—John Baker (’68), Larry Jones (’68), Lionel Engelman (’66), Scott Wilson (’85), Larry Peirano (’51), Paul Larson (’52), Jim Griggs (’57), Bob Thompson, Bill Harris, four Chairs of the Academic Senate, Vice Chancellor Bob Lalanne and Chancellor Nicholas Dirks. We are all grateful to you.

On June 17, $40,000,000 of revenue bonds were sold (over-subscribed by a factor of 10), and EdR issued the order to begin renovation to Clark Construction. Construction fences went up, contractors arrived and the sweet sounds of renovation were heard! This will continue until early August 2016, when the newly renovated and refurnished Bowles Hall Residential College will officially re-open! How proud we all will be! Please plan to join us for the Grand Re-Opening celebration in early August 2016 when the best undergraduate experience in the entire UC system will become available to the newest generation of Bowles men and women.

It is important to understand our strategy to gain approval of our proposal to the University for this “first of its kind” commitment to combine the knowledge of the Bowles alumni, UCB Academic Senate and the concept of self-government, vital elements of the UCB undergraduate experience. We began by understanding the requirements of 21st century Berkeley undergraduates and the organizations that will make future decisions to offer them the opportunities to pursue a productive adult career and life. Hence, we concluded that the collective experience of Berkeley’s faculty, our alumni who have hired and developed many recent graduates, and an understanding of each student’s aspirations and aptitudes. We also realized that this would be difficult if the students’ living surrounds were in disrepair, functionally obsolete and perhaps unsafe.

With this assessment, we crafted our plans to renovate Bowles Hall and create the experience that would provide our undergraduates with the best opportunity to pursue a rich, fulfilling post-Bachelor experience. We chose the common sense, proven residential college model, first implemented in the US when Bowles Hall opened in 1928 and subsequently the current standard in more than 150 higher education sites in the US but replaced at Berkeley in the mid 1970s with a conventional dorm model for Bowles Hall. The Berkeley Academic Senate was quick to endorse our proposal, as was Bob Lalanne and the Berkeley Foundation. However, it was the arrival of Chancellor Dirks that provided us with the traction necessary to gain approval of the UC Board of Regents in March 2014. This led to the successful negotiations of the Ground Lease and the selection of experienced developer, architect, builder, financial advisor and underwriter, and legal counsel—all leaders in student housing public-private partnerships. We retained the “best of breed” and they have served us well! You embraced this effort with your leadership, life skills and experience, your encouragement and your financing (more than $2,000,000 to date!). We have now burned the boats and cannot return to passive support for the past administration-centric model of Bowles Hall for short-term residents. We have already begun the efforts to breathe life into our vision and commitment to the University and future Bowles Hall undergraduates. Your Board of Directors has been reconstituted with the experience, desire and respect necessary for the next season of this project—renovation of the Hall and preparation to re-launch the residential collage model to better prepare our graduates for their future lives. As detailed elsewhere in this newsletter, we are launching a capital campaign to provide the necessary financial resources to make good on our promises, including repayment of high-interest debt related to last-minute renovation cost overruns. The Phoenix Program, designed to provide a test-bed for new operational responsibilities, will begin next month with the arrival of 38 students to reside in a former sorority house that we have leased for the coming academic year. Professor Daniel Melia has been selected as our first Housemaster and Professor Tina Sachs has been selected as our Dean. Both will reside with their spouses in newly created apartments at the Hall. Three Graduate Residents will be selected. They also will be in residence at the Hall.

We will need enhanced leadership, more funding and your broad personal participation in this multi-faceted program. We all will be truly proud to be part of this life-changing experience as newly graduated high school 18-year olds, transfer students and returning veterans transition to become proud, prepared, productive, informed and participant members of our families and society. Our personal compensation will be in the quiet satisfaction that we significantly contributed to making this possible.

I thank you for the privilege of collaborating with you in the creation of this new undergraduate experience and opportunity at Berkeley! It will be a shared-fun ride!

Construction Highlights
Paid via $40 million in revenue bonds
- Reconfiguring all student rooms into singles and doubles with shared bathrooms
- Doubling toilet count
- New commercial kitchen to provide full meal service, seven day a week
- New roof (tile removal, waterproofing base, install new seismically-sound tiles)
- 2500-square foot, two-story addition to house hot water boilers, trash enclosure and an upstairs game room
- All new plumbing and gas fired heating; steam heating being discontinued
- All new electric distribution and fixtures
- Restoring the wood finishes in the Lounge, Library, and Dining Commons
- Seismic upgrades including buttressing the West Wing behind the Dining Commons, installing a “floating slab” under the Library, and providing shear reinforcement in the elevator area
- New elevator with half-floor stop at the 3rd floor for ADA access; elevator large enough to accommodate a hospital gurney
- Restoration of the exterior windows

Student Program Highlights
Paid via alumni donations, including new capital campaign
- Comprehensive technology upgrade (high speed internet, printers, etc.)
- Library acquisitions (textbook lending, etc.)
- Certain residence upgrades not covered by construction bonds (example: patio dining area)
- Housemaster and Dean funding, including monthly stipend and discretion spending that will enrich programming
- Aptitude testing and other career/life developing programs/mentoring programs
- Off-campus student experiences (symphony, museums, cultural events)
- Foundation operations, including certain residence recruiting efforts
- Need-based student financial support for personal reasons (visit sick family members, attend a conference, purchase key technology/books/periodicals)
- Guest lecturers and artists/scholars/dignitaries in residence
In preparation for the opening of Bowles Hall Residential College (BHRC) in August 2016, Bowles Hall Foundation has created the Phoenix program as our pilot into residential college life. The program will be housed at The Berk on Arch Street in Berkeley, just across from Tolman Hall on the north side of campus. The program has a very clear mission: Use the upcoming academic year to implement the customs, rules and traditions that will be put in place in the resurrected Bowles Hall Residential College.

Participating students – 38 men and women and a Graduate Resident – will live together and dine communally in-house once a week under the non-resident supervision of Housemaster Professor Daniel Melia and recently named Dean of Bowles Hall Professor Tina Sacks. They will be primarily focused on three major areas of student involvement: academic progress, house government and personal enrichment.

Because funding for these programs must come from Bowles Hall alumni and friends like you, we feel it’s critical that you understand the reasoning behind each area and the programming we will be putting in place.

Academic Progress

With a goal of graduating in four years, all students in the Phoenix program will meet with the Dean, the Housemaster and/or an advisor from their College (Letter and Science, Engineering, Natural Resources, etc.) early in the Fall term to prepare a written program plan that will allow the student to make maximum use of his or her time at Cal. The academic progress of each student will then be monitored by the Dean. UCB faculty members and interested Bowles alumni will be enlisted to provide more informal advice to students investigating various career paths. Additional guidance will come in multiple forms:

- Aptitude testing, via the UCB Career Center and/or private foundations
- Undergraduate seminars at The Berk
- Close ties with Student Learning Center and the UHS Tang Medical Center
- Awareness and understanding of opportunities presented by honor societies
- Assistance applying for Rhodes or Marshall scholarships
- Financial support to sponsor student cost of participation

House Government and Citizenship

Well informed by Bowlesmen of the past and deeply qualified board of directors, the Phoenix group will develop a model of self-governance that will be carried into the renovated Hall. Several standing committees have already been sketched out by the students at a preliminary meeting in June, including Housing & Dinning, Alumni, Judicial, Athletics, Traditions, and Social.

Phoenix and Bowles students will also divide themselves into two to four groups for intramural competition in everything from sports to improvements in grade point average. Individuals and groups will be encouraged to involve themselves in activities in the wider community (tutoring, charity sports events, volunteer work, etc.).

Personal Enrichment

The Bay Area is an exceptionally rich environment in the arts, but many financially-constrained students have not yet had the opportunity to experience high level music, theater, and visual arts. With this in mind, we seek alumni support to create an Arts Programs Fund that would allow us to purchase season tickets to local theater offerings like the Berkeley and American repertories, musical performances at the San Francisco Symphony and Opera, and a group membership at the Fine Arts Museum in San Francisco.

The tickets will be distributed to the students on a first-come first-served basis or a lottery system devised by the students. All the venues noted above are accessible via public transportation.

Capital Campaign to Support These Efforts

Fulfilling the promise of a robust and effective residential college requires an enthusiastic student group that is actively supported by alumni who want to see them succeed. This will come in the form of participative hands-on support but also financial solvency. We hope you will join us on this mission. 🚀
A New Chapter for the Hart Library

Gifted to Bowles Hall Residential College in 1939, the once dignified and stately Julien and Helen Hart Memorial Library is also undergoing a major restoration and renovation effort of its own.

The ambitious new focus will not only pay tribute to the Library’s majestic past but will also create a vibrant and integral gathering place that will help foster a dynamic future reliant on new forms of communication, research methods and resource tools.

A small but dedicated ad hoc committee of five individuals is now focused on the restoration effort which includes Bowles Hall Historian Louis Grivetti (’60). Located just off the main entrance to Bowles Hall, the once-esteemed Library lays especially close to the Hayward fault line which means a new foundation needs to be retrofitted into place to protect it for future generations. The short-term result is that between 2,000 to 2,500 books (most of which are pre-1950s) and an untold number of prized memorabilia (yearbooks, recordings, awards, etc.) are currently being stored in a lighting and temperature controlled facility in Richmond for safekeeping.

The plan over the next year is to completely reconstitute and reconfigure the space that will once again become a catalyst for exciting idea generation activities and thought-provoking discussion while providing fast and full computer and global access absolutely necessary for today’s uber-connected students.

Then, in the weeks leading up to the re-opening the Hall, the Library will be a literal frenzy of carefully choreographed activity. With the help of an amazing group of up to a dozen volunteers, the books will be re-shelved and newly re-organized by theme, topic and focus. Some of the re-worked library sections will include Adjustment to University Life, Economics and Management of Personal Finances and Post Graduate Career Opportunities, just to name a few.

Also, two very special collections will be available and/or on display including Books by Bowles Hall Alumni and Bowles Hall Memorabilia (note valuable items will be protected in glass cases). These new offerings are sure to be favorites among visiting alums, will help further the Bowles Hall legacy and bolster a lasting sense of pride for all who visit. Moving forward after the Hall and Library are reopened and fully operational, the plan is to carefully select and add 10-15 new books to the collection per year to stay relevant and reflective of the changing academic needs and resident requests.

But the restored Hart Library will be about more than books and ephemera this time around. The vision is for the Library to serve as a hub for thoughtful discussion, guidance and communication. In fact, a dedicated web portal is being developed specific for the Hart Library at Bowles Hall.

In addition, an ongoing series of talks, monthly seminars and guest speakers is planned to focus on helpful and relevant topics that will include Time Management, Overcoming Writing Blocks and Key Resources for Quality Writing and Proper Citation Methods, etc.

Part of the mission of the Hart Library is to help provide a path for undergraduates to not only succeed at UC Berkeley but graduate in four years AND be fully prepared to acclimate to a successful life beyond the University. Indeed, that’s quite a vision for the old definition and purpose of a library. But it is absolutely possible, attainable and achievable with the proper guidance, determination and resources like those to be discovered and treasured at a fully restored Hart Library at Bowles Hall.

Let’s figuratively and literally turn the page to a bright new chapter for the Julien and Helen Hart Memorial Library!
Complex financial dealings and challenges aside, the actual process of restoring and renovating a historic structure built in the 1920s is no easy feat and certainly not without tricky physical challenges to boot. However, as we all know, challenges can often become opportunities that give way to creative solutions that hadn’t been considered before; we hope that will be the case with Bowles Hall.

For now, let’s take a moment to figuratively walk through what John A. Baker (’68) expects to be the first five construction hurdles that need to be worked through in the near future as the beginning of the exciting renovation process takes shape.

1) Surprise, Surprise!
The actual demolition of the interior walls of the student residential area – that has housed 200 people at a time the course of a nearly a century – is going to be very interesting indeed. In fact, John expects to find all kind of surprises once they start (carefully) tearing down the interior walls to make way for new room layouts, designs and configurations. Exactly what kind of surprises you ask? Check back in a few months for a more detailed answer; after all, it wouldn’t be a surprise if we know the answers ahead of time.

2) Re-Routes for New Layouts
As one can imagine, renovating an existing structure made almost entirely of concrete is not terribly forgiving. Given the restoration plans call for completely changing the layout of the student rooms, lots of strategic and carefully mapped out drilling is going to be taking place to re-route new plumbing, electrical and heating when and where needed. This is a very critical step that cannot be “un-done” so moving forward with trepidation is warranted and wise.

3) Roof Re-Do
While much of the renovation work will be focused on the interior of Bowles Hall, the steep roof needs important yet meticulous attention as well. While the high quality red terra cotta tiles on the roof could in theory last forever, they all need to be removed so the concrete underneath can be waterproofed. Afterward, the timeless terra cotta tiles will be very carefully re-installed with new attachments that will more safely secure them to stay in place in the case of an earthquake.

4) Exterior TLC
Like the interior of Bowles Hall, the exterior of the concrete structure has also taken a real beating over time (all-be-it by completely different forces at work). Weather and simply the passage of time have clearly left imprints on the walls that are exhibiting lots of cracks and build-up at the present time. The plan is to carefully clean the exterior walls then patch and repair obvious cracks and holes to prevent further damage and erosion.

5) Breath of Fresh Air for Windows
Given this majestic building features countless casement windows (i.e. windows that are attached with metal hinges and open sideways like doors) that are very old and, in most cases, in very bad condition, painstaking and time-consuming hand-labor must be conducted to return them to proper working condition. This is an especially tricky process because many of the windows haven’t been operable in years if not decades. Keep in mind, because the room layouts are changing, what was once a bathroom window might now be a bedroom window and it’s clearly imperative that students are able to easily open any and all windows when needed.

When it comes to renovating and restoring Bowles Hall Residential College to its once-glorious state, interesting construction challenges exist from top to bottom and from inside and out. The five outlined here represent a mere scratch on the surface of a complex, exciting and once-in-a-lifetime project that we should all be proud to be a part.
Last One Out

By Bill Ragsdale ('62)

Last one out. Little did I suspect when I left Bowles Hall in June of ’62 that 53 years later I’d be the last one out before its temporary closing for renovation. Turn out the lights, lock the front door and hand over the keys. No beds, no desks, an empty Lounge, an empty Dining Commons. It was a strange feeling but also a tremendous honor.

It was just this past May when Bowles Hall Foundation President Bob Sayles called to ask if I could coordinate the removal of books from the Hart Library. “Sure,” I replied, not realizing the scope of the project which would unfold over the next few weeks.

Further tasked with identifying and securing all items of “historical significance,” I inventoried the items that needed removal and safe storage: thousands of books, the major furnishings of the Lounge and the Dining Commons (most recently used as a recreation room) and many other artifacts. Included in the trove were 70 years of trophies and certificates, fireplace fixtures, two podiums, some church pews, a single Olympic oar and three paintings. The contents required 80 cartons, 205 square feet of storage, a mover, a fine art agent, four friends, a ladder and various hand tools – and, of course, an insurance rider and a license from the University to move the items.

By June 10, all was in place to move the major pieces. Four days later, with the able assistance of Lou Grivetti ('60), two current Bowlesmen and a friend, we prepared all the material and transported it to a storage locker in Richmond. A few days later, with the help of an art restoration expert and a specialty art storage firm, two beloved Bowles family portraits were placed in temperature-controlled facility where they will reside for the next 14 months, certainly a nice break from 80 years of steam heat.

With the Hall largely empty, I made two final trips from the Attic to Floor Two seeking any final relics. I turned up the fire poker, a few rusty beer cans and a painting of the north end of the Hall, probably a student painting. I admittedly spent a few nostalgic moments in the rooms I called home during my days in the Hall –704, 501 and 408 – and easily remembered many good times with my roommates, especially Tom Sheldon ('64).

My final survey led to me securing the main rooms, making my final exit and turning the keys over to the UC Real Estate Services office. During my journey to the office, I walked confident in our history and excited about our future. The extensive renovation of our great Hall is a new beginning, not only for a building we called home but for the Bowles way of life. I may have been the last one out in the old Hall but I’ll be among the first ones in when it reopens in August 2016.

Education Through Fellowship indeed.

The mission of the Bowles Hall Foundation is to re-establish the Bowles Hall experience in a restored Bowles Hall, breathing life back into a noble dream of a rich residential experience for undergraduate students at UC Berkeley.

With restoration underway and the Phoenix Programs set to launch, we are moving forward aggressively on many fronts, and many volunteers—both existing and new—will be needed. This is an outstanding opportunity to get involved and be associated with the creation of a newly renovated Bowles Hall and the restoration of the Bowles Hall Residential College experience.
