President’s Report

Spring is a wonderful time of year, a time of beginnings! This spring is especially exciting for us as we near the re-opening of the Hall on August 20 as the Bowles Hall Residential College! We are privileged to witness our vision becoming reality! I visited the Hall last week and saw the student suites being defined and in some cases finished, the Matteson Lounge and Newman Dining Commons beginning to look as new as they were in 1929, and the Hart Library with its seismic retrofitting complete. New natural gas lines and fiber optic cables are being brought into the Hall, and the kitchen is being readied for its new equipment. We all owe a huge Thank You to John Baker (’68), our BHF Vice President, and his colleagues from Clark Construction, for a magnificent renovation which is currently on budget and slightly ahead of schedule!

The Phoenix Program, a year-long beta test of our planned operational protocols, is almost finished. We have learned so much from these 38 students about appropriate programming, professional staffing, and student self-government. As a result, we have added a third faculty member to the College staff—Prof. Alexei Vranich (’91) is currently documenting the revised programs to be implemented this fall. We thank each of the Phoenix staff and students, many of whom will join the Bowles Hall Residential College in August. The College will be even more successful because of the Phoenix Program!

We are honored by the sterling students applying to the Residential College. Some of their application essay responses are included in this newsletter—although the applicants are quite...

diverse, their rationale for selecting the Residential College is sincere, well-reasoned, mature and forward-thinking. They want to become part of an intentionally-designed, small residential community of shared values, goals, and mutual respect. This is the type of student that we hoped would be attracted to the Hall! Scott Wilson (’85) has joined our Board and is leading this effort to enroll the best and brightest members to the Bowles Hall Residential College community.

We appreciate your generous response to our current $3,000,000 Capital Campaign. We still have more wood to chop to hit our goal, but we believe that it is achievable. Doing so will support more student-centered experiences, such as appreciation of the arts, greater emphasis on academic achievement and career readiness, sponsored internships, and networking.

We are now beginning to look beyond the startup years to a time when the College has stabilized and making a unique contribution to collegiate life at Berkeley. This will include enhancements to the Hall, new experiences, the greater interaction between our alums and College residents, sponsored summer excursions and internships, and the establishment of a permanent endowment and scholarships. Although this project is and will continue to be focused on the students’ on-campus residential experience, it is also one of reuniting alums in a shared effort—the passing of the torch from which we benefited so much to new generations of leaders, the highly accomplished and just plain folks for whom the Bowles Hall Experience has meaningfully changed their lives.

In closing, please consider joining us on August 27 for the Hall’s Grand Re-Opening Celebration, an event being designed to recognize your extraordinary accomplishment. To our knowledge, this is the first time ever that the UC System has allowed a private party to take the responsibilities and burdens of ownership of any facility and the functions carried out within it. Your credibility, experiences, and intellectual and financial resources have made this possible. We are now poised to support new generations of Bowles men and women in realizing their visions! This deserves a great celebration—which will first take place on August 27, 2016, and every year thereafter!

Thanks for your support, and enjoy the springtime. We have heavy lifting to do for this fall!

Please call me anytime, on any subject. Thanks for your support.

All the best…

Bob Sayles (’52), President
Bowles Hall Foundation

The Foundation will continue to advocate on behalf of BHRC, its students, its leadership, and all who remember the Hall’s influence on their formation as individuals and professionals. BHF intends to supply the first class and all subsequent classes of students with the types of life-shaping experiences from which you and your classmates benefited. In order to accomplish this goal, the Foundation will apply the same zeal and intentionality used to sustain the Hall as it formerly used to build it. Moreover, the Foundation will continue to enlist its loyal previous donors—as well as all new donors who step forward—in this cause.

Our mission is two-fold. First, it is to provide a steady stream of budget-affecting, annual funds to the in-residence faculty for their use in operating BHRC and underwriting the Bowles Hall Experience, which we hold dear. And, second, it is to build an endowment that supports both specific BHRC activities and assures its future as an independent, self-governing residential college on the UC Berkeley campus. Thus, we seek your ongoing support and philanthropy.

What can you do for BHRC? If you have been a regular or sporadic donor over the years, please continue to make your annual gift. Unrestricted gifts are always useful, but if you would like to designate your gift to a particular BHRC activity or function, please feel free to do so. BHRC will need such funds to purchase materials for Hart Library, technology for students’ use, furniture/furnishings, and a vehicle with which to transport disabled individuals to and from BHRC, as well as to host speakers, hold symposia, and guide students in career planning and graduate degree program applications.

If you would like to leave a legacy for BHRC, please consider establishing a named endowment fund to benefit students or BHRC. Named endowment funds can be started with a gift or pledge of $25,000 and may be designated for any of BHRC’s unrestricted or specific purposes. Such gifts may be created during your lifetime or by including BHRC in your testamentary plans.

We also have student rooms left to name, including doubles and single-student rooms. Singles can be named for $12,500; doubles are $20,000.

My work with BHF over the years has informed me that a majority of those who have lived in the Hall trace much or at least some of their success in life to their shared experiences in the Hall with friends and classmates—call it a Bowles Hall culture. I have seen a similar culture of philanthropy grow among alumni and friends that enabled a dream to become reality. I encourage all who hold this culture in esteem to help BHRC in fulfilling all its promise—now and in the future.
by John Baker ('68)
I've been in the construction business my entire career. Every now and then, something stops me dead in my tracks. Sometimes it is what seems like an insurmountable obstacle that requires a lot of creative thinking to figure out. Other times it is a completely illogical client request that makes me wonder what on earth they could be thinking. But these types of confounding situations always pale in comparison to unexpected discoveries.

Such was the case a few weeks ago when, amidst working on the ceiling in the lounge, we unearthed a cache of handwritten letters to Bowlesman Daniel Fogard in 1943. Most of the notes are unreadable, the victim of unpreserved aging. But a few are legible and may become part of the Bowles Hall History Book being curated by Bowles Hall Historian Louis Grivetti (see page 13 of this newsletter). The actual content of the letters is secondary to the feelings they gave me. When I was living in the Hall, I remember standing on the shoulders of those who came before me, but I had never held their personal writings. And had it not been for our restoration project, these letters may never have been found, possibly lost forever in what very well could have become a non-alumni-led demolition project had the Bowles Hall Foundation not been created. And with restoration completion on the horizon, the letters gave me a second wind in what has been a fulfilling but challenging project.

Most recently, we finally cut through the red tape to figure out with PG&E how to run a new gas line to the Hall. It took determination on our part and good bit on ingenuity on theirs (long story short, Google “horizontal directional boring” and prepare to be amazed!). Our gas line comes from the corner of Hearst and Gayley some 1,500 feet away, but it will arrive with the force needed to serve our active Hall.

Another major accomplishment since my last update relates to the front outside of the Hall. Most of the scaffolding has been removed and our crown jewel once again shines with a new roof and comprehensively scrubbed exterior walls. Be sure to check out the back cover of this newsletter to get a sense of things; it's truly amazing what a good bath can do to a home built in 1929! We've also completed framing and topping of the new annex. One floor will serve as a kitchen storage and utility area; the second floor will be a large game room.

Inside the Hall, we’ve completed installation of permanent power as well as the new elevator. On Floors 5 to 7, carpeting has been rolled and suspended ceiling has been placed. Most of the showers have gone in. The lounge once again has a ceiling. We have opened up a model suite featuring two double rooms and its shared bath, an important feature that the student residence recruiting team has been successfully using to drive applications. Fire sprinklers have been readied, room air handling completed, thermostats installed. And miles of fiber optics have been laid to feed students with high speed connectivity to the internet and the world outside the Hall.

Such physical trappings certainly will create a world-class structure in which the next generation of Bowles Hall residents can gain skills to make their mark on society. But, without question, what motivates me now more than ever are the thoughts of future Bowles men and women writing messages to loved ones near and far, detailing their experiences inside these walls and possibly stuffing them into new secret hiding places. Daniel Fogard would be proud. I can only hope you will be too.

The apartment for the College Dean is being fashioned from a former UC maintenance storage room. It features three new skylights to provide natural light to what will be a truly unique place to live.

We fast-tracked the opening of a model suite of Floor 1 to give prospective residents a deep sense of what living spaces will look and feel like.

Every room has an attached bath featuring a vanity, shower and toilet. Single rooms have one door; most shared doubles have two.
An important new functional feature of the Hall is a two-story annex on the north side. It replaces what had become a dilapidated woodworking shop used by the University.

The first floor of the annex will serve as a kitchen storage and utility area; the second floor features an expansive game room. Outer walls will match the historical features of the rest of the Hall.

As we eye the Hall’s re-opening in August, very meaningful work will be happening over the next 90 days. This includes connecting permanent water, finishing out the back patio including installing its first-ever draining system, completing the carpeting process, placing restored fixtures throughout, and significant work on the kitchen area. We’ll also be completing work on all the public spaces, including a dining commons fit to serve as the center of the community.

The College Principal’s quarters include a modest kitchen. Here you can see initial framing has been completed and plumbing laid in.

Featuring two large windows facing the Greek Theatre, the game room will include a pool table, ping pong and a large-screen television.
The Next Generation is Upon Us

“The Next Generation is Upon Us”

“But when I arrived at Cal, my dreams turned to struggles, just as it does for many first-generation children at top universities. I felt out of place and alone during my first year here; everything was too fast and too stressful. So I turned to the same method that helped me survive at home: I built lasting friendships with those I lived with in the dorms. They helped me shape my college identity and become motivated again. They helped me find the courage to intern at an on-campus community organization, and the strength to find time to join others. I made new friends, meet new colleagues. I became me. And yet I know from my childhood that I must keep going. I’m looking for more friends, to expand my academic networks, to receive guidance from professors, and learn crucial skills that strengthen my peer networks. Support systems are the glue that keep people afloat, whether that be in an impoverished neighborhood or a university like UC Berkeley. With the guidance and support of BHRC, I believe that I will be able to accomplish my academic goal of attending law school and my personal goal of building long-lasting friendships that will help carry me through the rest of my life.”

—from a rising Junior

“I was born between the sidewalk cracks in a low-income, mainly immigrant neighborhood. As I grew up, these fractures of poverty deepened into crevices. Families lacked the resources to buy healthy foods and put their children in early childhood education programs. Middle school and high school students lacked adequate teachers and counselors to thrive in the school system. But while many of us failed, I was able to succeed because I found a strong support system. It was my family that pulled me from the abyss and kept me above ground. When my father passed away from cancer and my sister left home, it became more difficult. My mother was hit hard by the recession, could not find employment and became depressed; the sidewalk cracks widened for me again. So my support system changed from family to friends and teachers—and it was through them that I found the motivation to do well in school, the courage to apply to college, and the strength to pursue activities that I loved no matter what anyone else thought.

“As a member of the Kashia Band of Pomo Indians, I grew up in a family heavily influenced by a rich culture. From a young age, I was taught how to contribute positively to a community and respect its members. By living in the Bowles Hall Residential College, I hope to be surrounded by people to support and advise each other, so that I can consider my friends.”

The BHRC Residence Selection Committee is charged with evaluating candidates for the 2016-17 class of Bowles Hall Residential College. Since we opened applications in December, the Committee has been amazed at the quality of students who have raised their hands in interest of living with us. Applicants are asked to provide basic demographic information, but Committee members assess students based strictly on responses to questions that ask for reasons why the student wants to be part of Bowles. We thought you’d enjoy reading a selection of their submissions.

Essays have been edited for space and clarity.
“Coming from a high school of 300 students, I expect Cal to be a bit of an adjustment. While small towns certainly have their fair share of issues—and I’m excited to move into the wider world—there’s still something special about the intimacy of small community. It’s easier to be active when the people you’re working with aren’t a wall of strangers, but the familiar faces of friends with whom you co-exist on a daily basis. So while I’m thrilled by the possibilities offered at Cal, some small part of my brain is still absolutely terrified by the prospect of attending a school with more students in the freshman class than people in my hometown. Being able to retain some of the best aspects of my hometown community dynamic at a place like Bowles Hall is an opportunity for which I would be incredibly grateful.”

— from an incoming Freshman

“I am the first in my family to attend college. I began at my local community college where I learned what it meant to be a part of a community. Because almost everyone there came from disadvantaged backgrounds, camaraderie among the students irrespective of culture or age was necessary to accomplish one’s goals. Through these friendships, I became influenced to pursue engineering and decided to seek National Science Foundation funding for my research, a significant feat from the community college level. Alone the task of applying might have been unbearable for inexperienced students, most of whom had never seen a university lab. So I joined forces with three other students. We encouraged and supported each other through the process that led to funding at prestigious universities across the country and later presented our research at the Spring 2015 meeting of the Materials Research Society. None of this would have been possible without fellowship.

“After transferring to Cal before my junior year, I’m living with students studying the same subjects with similar backgrounds, and the lack of diversity—both cultural and intellectual—has become constricting. BHRC can help me once again immerse myself in an environment that is dissimilar and encouraging. I will use this opportunity to advance my leadership and interpersonal skills, and join forces with others to follow my passions and accomplish my goals.”

— from a rising Senior

“I grew up with the firm belief that UC Berkeley was a university of transcendence. Like many people, I knew it to be home to some of the most intelligent, open-minded, and diverse people in the world. I also knew it to be challenging but fair, filled with obstacles and solutions. When I was accepted, I realized that dreams can come true. Bursting with Bear pride, I envisioned my freshman year as one living in a setting among others who shared my deep sense of commitment within a community that included students, faculty, and alumni. Instead, I found a residence that has the potential to become a place where people can feel very alone.

“Where I sought community and opportunity, the residence halls offered perfunctory services. Where I sought an integrative on-campus living experience, my housing felt disconnected. And yet as I approach the close of my freshman year, I realize that a large part of my sense of belonging to Cal comes from living on-campus. In every sense, I feel that Bowles Hall Residential College offers what I’ve been searching for at Cal—connection to my university, pride among my peers, a sense of belonging, and playing an important role in continuing the tradition of education through fellowship.”

Student Recruiting Update

by Scott Wilson (’85)

We’ve had a busy and very encouraging three months of recruiting efforts for the inaugural class of undergraduate students who will enter Bowles Hall Residential College this fall. With a goal of achieving wide diversity among class years and colleges of study, I’m pleased to report that response from interested residents has been tremendous and we’re thrilled with the quality of applications. As you can read in the pages 6-7 of this newsletter, students are well-spoken, engaged and offer a range of life experiences—just as we’d hoped when we envisioned the College’s ideal demographic characteristics.

You will recall that the restored Hall will accommodate up to 186 undergraduate students. As of mid-April, we have had more than 400 students begin our application process. Of those, nearly 300 students have submitted for consideration so far. Our process collects basic demographic information—without asking about gender or disabilities—and places all emphasis on student responses to open-ended questions that ask the applicant to detail their interests in BHRC, why they want to join us and what they believe they can contribute to the community.

Once submitted, each student is reviewed by our Residence Selection Committee composed of several faculty members and alumni. Having access only to essay responses, each member reviews every applicant and scores the submission based on a pre-determined scale. Ratings are then averaged to establish the Acceptance and Waitlist threshold for each application period. Thus far, we have gone through three such phases: Early Acceptance and two “rolling application” periods where we assess and notify that period’s pool of students about once per month.

The results have been extremely positive. We’re achieving an almost equal balance of men and women. We’re on-target to achieve the desired representation from each class year. The colleges of study reflect the general distribution across the campus itself. And while the majority of accepted students naturally hail from California, we’re pleased to report that more than a quarter of domestic applicants come from outside the Golden State and we have representation from nine other countries.

Since mid-April, we have turned most of our attention to getting Accepted students to sign their lease and getting applications from incoming students—especially freshmen who just recently received their Cal acceptance. We’re using a variety of marketing tactics—the BHRC website, social media, events, press coverage, Cal Housing support—but we’re finding, expectedly but excitingly, that the top source of BHRC candidates is personal referral. With each wave of students we accept—and certainly thanks to the efforts of our Phoenix Program students and our alums—BHRC’s reputation as an attractive undergraduate residence is quickly expanding.

By June, we expect to have achieved full occupancy of the Hall with our inaugural class for August, and we look forward to introducing them to you at the Grand Re-Opening Celebration.

Alexei Vranich, PhD (’91), Director of Program Development

For most people, naming a favorite memory is a relatively simple task. A wedding, the birth of a child, perhaps jumping out of an airplane on a landmark birthday. But Alexei Vranich is not a simple man. Pose the question to BHRC’s recently-named Director of Program Development and you get a long pause as he catalogs through an array of recollections.

There’s the time when he found himself in an indigenous highland Bolivian church dressed as a bear and sitting in a pew with a few other bears. There’s the time he gave then-First Lady Hillary Clinton a private tour of a pre-Columbian archaeological site, getting peppered by her thoughtful questions without any Secret Service in sight. But when pressed, Alexei’s memories take him back to his days living in Bowles Hall as an undergraduate student.

“Probably my greatest memory was my first day at Bowles,” he says. “I hadn’t even unpacked my boxes and I had a life-changing experience. You could feel the friendship and the camaraderie everywhere you went. I felt like I belonged.”

Born in Madison, Wisc., to parents who both received Romance Language doctorates from Cal, Alexei spent his earliest years living in Spain. His parents were active, carting him from one ruin to the next, into famous castles and unknown ones. And it was there that his fascination for old things took root. “I figure out that what I really liked was discovering how people used to live thousands of years ago,” he says.

His family relocated to New York City and when it came time to choose a college, he wanted a U.S. school that was far away but had a European feel. That led him to the same campus where his parents fell in love, our cherished Cal.

“I absolutely loved being in Berkeley,” he says, “and I really loved living on campus [at Clark-Kerr].” But the feeling was short-lived. As a delayed entrant who started in the spring, he couldn’t get on-campus housing during the fall semester and was forced to live way off campus, waiting for his RSSP housing lottery number to be called.

As he tried to hold on, he struck up a conversation with a stranger who spoke glowingly about the best residence on campus: Bowles Hall. Alexei was enchanted—“It seemed like a no-brainer,” he says now—and he immediately changed his top preference to Bowles. As so often happens on the path to great memories, a spot at Bowles magically opened up just before the spring semester.

Alexei wasted no time getting deeply involved, raising his hand when the Hall was looking for an Outside President. Between his studies, he was the man about campus, speaking with anyone and everyone about the great Bowles offering. “I was definitely all-in,” he says. “I couldn’t get over the immediate friendship and opportunity I found when I moved in. We laughed all the time and we held these big events that included everyone in the Hall. You’d be having the time of your life while getting this sense of real accomplishment.”

After earning his Bachelor’s degree in Anthropology in 1991, Alexei quickly ticked off his archaeology bucket list: doctorate at U-Penn, site digs all over South America, Fulbright Scholar, Fellowship at Dumbarton Oaks (Harvard), National Science Foundation grant winner, guest expert appearances in print and on television, etc., etc., etc. “But what I pretty quickly realized,” he says, “was what I enjoyed most was working with people, especially college kids. It’s probably attributable to my time at Bowles, but working alongside young adults was my calling.”

After spending the last six years as Faculty-in-Residence at UCLA, Alexei returns to Berkeley charged with helping formulate how our residential college will operate from a programmatic standpoint. Working closely with College Principal Daniel Melia and the Bowles Hall Foundation Board of Directors, Alexei is helping design the student responsibilities and processes for the reconstituted Bowles Hall Association, including house meetings, social programs, judicial, dining, publicity and communications, and even the mascot. He’s also quickly pulled on the hat that he most proudly wore as an undergrad: Cultivate relationships with Cal faculty and administrators to gain their deep support for our program.

“Bowles Hall needs to be a shining beacon on the hill again,” he says. “Yes, it needs to succeed for Bowles itself, but it also needs to succeed for the system at large. What we’re doing is important on so many levels that I literally don’t want to be anywhere else.”

And, who knows, maybe, just maybe, he’ll find himself dressed as a bear once again. Only this time it would be in a fit of celebration because he has, at last, returned home.
Seeking Your Input
To help ensure that we plan an event that everyone will enjoy, we’d like to collect your input on key aspects. You will find a printed version of a survey to the right that you can clip and send to me via regular mail. For those of you for whom we have an email address, we will send you a link so you can fill out the survey online. Or you can always give me a call.

Your Hotel Room Awaits
Knowing that many of those attending will be coming from out of town, we have worked with several hotels in Berkeley to act as host hotels. You’ll find details to the left. I encourage you to reserve your special room rate early.

Seeking Auction Items
As detailed in the last newsletter, we’re holding a special auction in support of the Bowles Hall Foundation with all proceeds going directly into student needs. One item that we will auction is a timeshare vacation in Hawaii, but we need many more items. Please contact me if you can assist in any way with this effort.

We are open to all suggestions to make this meaningful event that is fun for all. If you have any ideas or you’re able to volunteer some of your time to help, please contact me at (650) 714-8302.

After 10 years of organizing, planning, fundraising, and now restoration construction, the Bowles Hall Residential College (BHRC) opens this August! The updated and renovated Hall will house up to 186 undergraduate students and a full-time, in-residence faculty of five. To celebrate this amazing accomplishment, we are holding a Grand Re-Opening Celebration on August 27.

The overall plan for the Re-Opening events was presented to the Bowles Hall Foundation Board of Directors in February, and implementation is now proceeding.

As you see, we have planned a variety of events to make the ceremony one to remember, including the opportunity to get to know the next generation of BHRC students living in our lovingly restored Bowles Hall. Bowles alumni and friends will be able to take pride in the incredible transformation that preserves the Hall’s majestic Gothic architecture and character, while at the same time upgrading living spaces and amenities to accommodate the needs of 21st Century students—ubiquitous wireless connection to the internet, one- and two-room suites each with a private bathroom, refurbished common areas and a modern-day kitchen. The Bowles Hall Foundation Board of Directors’ vision to greatly enhance the concept of on-campus living has indeed been realized.

Cal Chancellor Nicholas Dirks has committed to attend the event and will be the keynote speaker at the Ceremony. True to the form he displayed at our Groundbreaking Ceremony last July, the Chancellor recently conducted an interview in which he was asked about the Bowles Hall renovation project, and he spoke glowingly about our alumni-led project and the tremendous impact it is positioned to have on undergraduate life at Cal. Go to BowlesHallFoundation.org to find a link to the video interview.

Silent Auction & Other Donations
In order to perpetuate the Hall’s traditions and student activities, and to provide a sustainable income stream to help maintain the Hall’s independence, the Bowles Hall Foundation must continue to raise annual funds and establish an endowment.

As part of the Grand Re-Opening Celebration, we will be holding a silent auction—and possibly a live auction for high value items!—at the Gala Dinner. All proceeds will be used to support the Hall’s future needs. One item already donated is a timeshare in Hawaii. We will also have artwork, historic Bowles plates, and other special items.

Do you have any items which you would like to donate for this auction?
___ Definitely
___ Possibly
___ Maybe, but I need more details.
___ Unfortunately, not at this time.

Would you like a call from the Bowles Hall Foundation to discuss other donation opportunities?
___ Yes
___ No, not at this time

Please let us know if you have any specific thoughts on how we can make this a once-in-a-lifetime event.

- [ ] I would like to make a pledge. Please contact me to arrange a payment schedule.
- [ ] I would like to make a donation via Paypal. Please contact me with details.
Negotiations are underway with Arcadia Press to prepare a book on the history of Bowles Hall. The publisher’s approach stresses images in their publications, suggesting 80% of content feature photographs and illustrations of activities, events, people and notable memorabilia; documents; and selected press clippings. Artwork carries an explanatory caption and acknowledgment of the source and date.

The Bowles Hall scrapbooks, which were scanned by Alexei Vranich and available to BHAA members and friends on a CD, represent a rich resource of images, documents, and clippings. And while these original materials housed in the Bowles Hall Archives are quite helpful, there are many years where activities and events went undocumented or the information is very limited.

We Need Your Help

Historical information is especially “thin” regarding activities and events involving Bowles Hall residents during periods of the Free Speech Movement, Vietnam War campus protests, and years leading up to securing the Hall on the National Register of historical buildings. Photographs, sketches/artwork, or documents related to social events and activities either at Bowles Hall or by Bowles Hall residents on campus (athletics, honors, politics, other) are especially requested from Bowles Hall Alumni and Friends from the following years:

- 1970s: all years of this decade
- 1980s: all years
- 1990s: all years

If you are willing to share materials for potential inclusion in the book (originals or scanned copies), please label each item by name and date (exact date if possible, otherwise by month or semester/quarter). If the images provided include people, please provide their names. If the materials you send are selected for inclusion in the book, you will be acknowledged by name.

All original materials received will become part of the Bowles Hall Archives housed in the Hart Library once Bowles Hall is re-opened. Proceeds from book sales and book royalties go to the Bowles Hall Foundation.

We thank you in advance for your all of your support!
With the Blue and Gold’s being discontinued in 1970, Bowles Hall Foundation has had a difficult time locating alums from the more recent years, and we have had to rely on self-reporting and word of mouth to complete our rosters. This has, unfortunately, left many alums undiscovered and thus unreachable.

In August, during the final move out before the Bowles Hall renovations began, the class rosters of students who lived in the Hall from 2006 to 2011 were discovered stashed away in a closet. Ever since, we have been using various sources to find the latest contact information for each Bowlesman listed, but there are many we are unable to locate.

Do you have any contact information for the below alums that you could provide us? We’d like keep them informed on our progress and include them in future class reunions and regional briefings.

Please contact me at: BowlesHallFoundation@gmail.com. Thanks!

Departed Alums

Andrew Benson
(1918-2015)
Bowles Class of ’39
Along with Cal chemistry professor Melvin Calvin, Andrew answered a centuries-old question: How do plants use carbon dioxide? This seminal work was at the center of Andrew’s life from 1946 to 1954, and it opened the door to a new realm of advances that revolutionized plant biology and chemistry. Andrew went on to become a distinguished Emeritus Professor of Biology at UC San Diego, won dozens of international awards, and passed away as one of the world’s leading plant scientists of the 20th Century. He is survived by his wife of 45 years, Dee.

Bob Chappell
Bowles Class of ’47
Known by his family and friends for his prideful work and community service, and his love of social engagements, travel and humor, Bob was a loyal son, a wonderful husband, an exemplary father, and hard-working business owner. He grew up in Gilroy, served his country in the Army at Fort Ort, and headed to Cal to earn a mechanical engineer degree. He then returned home to run and grow his family business, Chappell Pump & Supply, becoming a highly-regarded water system contractor. He is survived by his wife, Rowena, and their son.

Don “Doc” Blomberg
Bowles Resident 1946-47
Born in Berkeley and raised mostly in Sacramento, Doc spent his early college years at Bowles before graduating from the Univ. of Southern California and later the Univ. of California School of Veterinary Medicine, Davis. He settled into the East Bay when he purchased the Antioch Veterinary Hospital, a clinic he ran for more than 50 years and was actively involved in many community programs and projects, including his passion of reading books to young children. Doc is survived by his wife of 38 years, Marleen, and their two sons.
Bob Carpenter (1929-2012)
Bowles Class of ’51
A civil engineer who spent two post-Cal years serving in the Panama Canal Zone, Bob spent most of his adult life running his family’s three stationary stores along the central coast of California. But he’ll be most remembered for his volunteerism. From Boy Scouts and Campfire USA to Elks Lodge and Rotary Club, Bob was a tireless supporter of the youth and needy. In his spare time, Bob loved music and enjoyed playing the trumpet, bugle and coronet. He is survived by four children, 10 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Bruce Hezlep (1933-2014)
Bowles Class of ’55
Reelin’ Good was the name of Bruce’s boat, a fishing vessel he helmed through the Panama Canal and on tours all over the West Coast. Reelin’ Good could also be the title of his life. After successfully running his family’s Southern California manufacturing business and selling it to Stanley Works, Bruce spent nearly 30 years on his boat enjoying the good life of fishing, swaying in harbors like his beloved Avalon Cove, watching kids swim, and smiling. The Navy veteran is survived by his wife, Mickie, and their three children.

Dwight Teeter (1935-2015)
Bowles Class of ’56
A lover of Mexican food, dirty jokes, fly fishing, and the First Amendment, Dwight taught journalism for 50 years at seven American universities, inspiring six Pulitzer Prize winners along the way. A highly-regarded legal scholar and historian, Dwight co-founded and keenly co-authored 13 editions of Law of Mass Communication, a widely-used college textbook first published in 1969 and well-known as an early watchdog of the dangerous intersection of national security, media activities and personal privacy. He is survived by three children.

Richard Abramson (1942-2015)
Bowles Class of ’64
Armed with a degree from Cal’s Boalt Law School, Richard made his professional mark on the world as a 48-year lawyer in Salinas. Known for his kindness, concern for others, integrity, intelligence, and a witty sense of humor, Richard selflessly gave his time to multiple charitable and community organizations. A dedicated family man, his biggest personal passion was tennis. He played at Cal, where he competed against Arthur Ashe, and later won a friendly match against Billie Jean King. He is survived by his three children.

Jim Christie (1947-2015)
Bowles Class of ’69
Zealous about the language and literacy of early childhood education—especially in culturally-diverse areas—Jim served as a Professor at Arizona State University. His research focused on the value of play time in a child’s early education. Recipient of the acclaimed Brian Sutton-Smith Lifetime Achievement Award, Jim published 16 books, hundreds of articles, mentored many students and teachers, and lectured internationally on the value of play in learning. He is survived by his wife Mary Christie and their two daughters.
Progress you can see! The north side of the Hall demonstrates the value of our restoration process with clean surfaces and a new roof.
